General information

Aims of the course

The expected results of the course respond to the following general aims

The importance of this subject lies in the fact that it is mirroring the current relevance - in Spain and abroad - of studies in the history of historiography. It is characterized by its approach coming from intellectual and socio-cultural history, which allows us to develop a wide analysis by avoiding a mere retrospective of books and authors from the current situation. This analysis includes, in addition to the examination of the foremost Spanish historians and their activities, that of cultural institutions that have them sheltered (their political and social circumstances too), without forgetting both their relations with foreign authors and their capacity to assimilate foreign influences.

Context and importance of this course in the degree

As a matter especially devoted to Spanish historiography and its social and political context, the contents of this subject are intended to complement all of those subjects of the Master degree tending to expose the political and cultural aspects of the history of Spain in modern and contemporary ages.

Recommendations to take this course

- To have basic knowledge of historiography and of the history of Spain in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.
- Basic knowledge of the English language.

Learning goals

Competences

After completing the course, the student will be competent in the following skills:

Capacity to distinguish theoretical and methodological differences in the historical discipline.

Knowledge of its current scientific trends.

These abilities are to be specified thus:

- To attribute the Spanish historians and their works to certain intellectual trends and historical circumstances.
- To distinguish the peculiarities of Spanish historiography compared to other neighbouring historiographic traditions.
- To assess what the place of Spanish historiography in the international field is - including its dependence on influences and debates coming from foreign countries and from Hispanism.

Learning goals

The student, in order to pass the course, will have to show her/his competence in the following skills:

Knowledge of the main institutions devoted to promoting the writing of history in Spain, from the late eighteenth century to the present.

Knowledge of the foremost historians (Modesto Lafuente, Rafael Altamira, Jaume Vicens Vives...).

Knowledge of the pivotal aspects and challenges of Spanish historiography throughout the two last centuries: the representation of the liberal idea of nation, its participation in the regeneration movement, the Civil War of 1936-39 and the exiles, the reception of the paradigm of economic and social history, the influence of current historical trends.

Ability to attribute Spanish works and authors to their respective historiographic trends and historical circumstances.

Importance of learning goals

The skills adquired in the course:

1. Contribute to the development of an advanced knowledge in political and intellectual history, in addition to the inquiry into the topic of historical memory in contemporary Spain. This will be achieved through the analysis of aspects such: the study of the foremost Spanish historians and hispanists, and their circumstances; the institutions and associations devoted to promoting the research and the teaching of history; the memories.
2. Help provide a context - scientific and intellectual circumstances - for Spanish historical bibliography in general, and for pivotal debates on historiography in Spain in particular.
3. Help to place the Spanish historiography in the international field.
4. Contribute to better understanding the relationships between primary and secondary sources in historical research, because of the special topic developed in this subject (historians and their historical writings).
5. Contribute to developing the ability to take part in academic debates on relevant aspects concerning Spanish society and culture.

Assessment (1st and 2nd call)

Assessment tasks (description of tasks, marking system and assessment criteria)

The student will prove that he/she has achieved the expected learning results by means of the following assessment tasks:

Assessment tasks:

- Attendance to classes and active participation in them.
- Individual presentation summarizing a book or a report/article to be discussed in the classroom.
- Composition of a ten-page essay/paper.
- Test.

Assessment criteria:

- Active participation will be considered: the involvement in the discussion of the texts by Spanish historians (see below), in addition to the debates started as a result of public presentations or suggested by the professor.
- Topics for individual presentations will be taken from the bibliography of the subject - with prior advice by the

- professor - preferably from the section "La situación actual" (referred to current trends and debates) (see below).
- The ten-page individual essay or composition will be supervised by the professor, consisting of free topic. It will be taken into account its emphasis in the vocabulary and in the presentation, the rigour of information, and its capacity for criticism.
  - The exam will consist of the development of a topic imparted by the professor.

Assessment system:

The grade will be distributed thus:

- Attendance to classes and participation: 20%
- Individual presentation: 20%
- Ten-page essay/paper: 40%
- Exam: 20%

Methodology, learning tasks, syllabus and resources

Methodological overview

The learning methodology of this course will consist of three types of activities:

1. Lectures.
2. Bibliographic research. The bibliography (available on moodle.unizar.es) is divided into three groups, in accordance with the aforementioned conception of the history of historiography:
  - Works of Spanish history of historiography (XVIII-XX centuries).
  - Studies on intellectual history (XVIII-XX centuries).
  - State of the art, overview, and recent debates on Spanish historiography.
3. Analysis of texts (see the section of Learning tasks).

Learning tasks

The course includes the following learning tasks:

- Lectures.
- Analysis of texts (texts available in moodle.unizar.es).
- Presentations and discussions by the students.

Syllabus

The course will address the following topics:

1. The new historical genres in the 19th century and their precedents: national history, history of civilization, and economic and social history.
2. The emergence of professional historiography in Spain.
3. The foreign influences and the role of Hispanism during the 20th century.
4. The current situation.
