4.1.Methodological overview

All courses in the discipline Literatura inglesa (English Literature) in the Grado en Estudios Ingleses (Degree in English Studies) comprise a theoretical and a practical part. The theoretical part consists on lectures providing basic information on the literary period in question, particularly on its movements, trends, and most relevant authors and works. Practice sessions will be devoted to the commentary and analysis of quotations, fragments and compulsory texts and will actively involve students, who must have read and worked on the texts prior to the session. All sessions will be in English and all compulsory texts must be read in English as well, and in an unabridged version.

As has been explained before, students are offered the possibility of writing an optional individual essay on the compulsory novels under the supervision of the teacher, who will provide guidance and will be available during office hours in order to deal with questions, help with the planning of the essay and the writing process. Students must show the practical and theoretical knowledge acquired in the subject, their capacity for synthesis, analysis and critical reasoning and their skill in managing the conventions of scholarly essays.

OTHER LEARNING RESOURCES

At the beginning of the course, the teachers will leave a dossier in the Faculty's copy shop including a series of critical readings to help students with the analysis of the novels. There are copies of all the compulsory novels in the María Moliner library. Most of them, not being subject to copyright restrictions, are available on the Internet (see Project Gutenberg en <http://www.gutenberg.org/>).

The course also has a webpage in the platform Moodle-unizar with diverse material related to the syllabus.
