4.Methodology, learning tasks, syllabus and resources

4.1.Methodological overview

The teaching method chosen for the development of the sessions in this course is a combination of lectures (in which both the basics of the topics to be studied and the recent trends and future research are transmitted) and the presentation of summaries or research papers by the students (which are about a topic of the literature within the framework of corporate governance).

There is a prior mandatory requirement for several of the sessions. Students have to read those articles from the literature that have been explicitly recommended by the teacher. This allows the teacher to explain in more detail the complex aspects for the students, while encouraging dialogue and group discussion.

4.2.Learning tasks

The course includes the following learning tasks:

- Class attendance and discussion of contents
- Analysis and discussion of academic readings
- Presentation and defense of an assignment carried out and a project proposal

Note: It is expected that classes will take place at the Faculty (offline). However, classes would take place semi-on-site or online if it were necessary due to safety reasons.
