4.1. Methodological overview

The learning process that has been designed for this subject is based on the following:

Active learning on the part of the student based on offering rigorous basic contents of the most consolidated topics and methods in Regional Economics together with the outline of some of the most innovative lines of research.

In addition to working on the contents, the method or procedure takes on great importance, in order to establish a series of guidelines, criteria and instruments that serve to rigorously process both the initial analytical arguments and the reception of information, its processing and application.

Finally, a series of values and attitudes are also basic to any learning task. In this sense, it promotes the appreciation of scientific knowledge as an instrument for detecting and solving economic and social problems. Honesty is also sought in the recognition of the potential and limitations of theories and methods, the evaluation of the quality of ideas according to scientific, social and ethical criteria, and the promotion of curiosity and intellectual restlessness in relation to the regional economy.

Evidently, the relationships throughout the course between students and teachers are based on mutual trust, commitment and reciprocity.

4.2. Learning tasks

The program offered to the student to help him/her achieve the expected results includes the following activities:

1. Presentation of topics, bibliographical orientation together with approach and, where appropriate, resolution of exercises by the teachers.
