3. Syllabus

Not applicable.

4. Academic activities

Completion of a tutored work whose fundamental nucleus is based on the elaboration of a translation with commentary of a Greek or Latin text, or the study from a historical perspective of Indo-European linguistics. The commentary, taking into account the specific circumstances of each text and to the proposals made, as the case may be, by the director of the work, will deal with a general interpretation of the text. Regarding the Indo-European Linguistics option, the paper will deal with a comparative historical study of Greco-Latin grammar from the perspective of comparative historical grammar.

5. Assessment system

For each of the assessment tests, the evaluation criteria and the levels of demand must be stated as explicitly as possible. Criteria means the aspects and qualities to be used for the evaluation of the evidence. These criteria must be accompanied by a sufficiently clear and explicit reference to the levels of demand required of the students. The evaluation and defence of the grade final project will be in accordance with current regulations.
